

A welcome initiative

The Delhi University has mandated that the academic documents of students seeking admission will be put through a forensic test, henceforth. Will this ensure greater transparency?

Indrajeet Vadgama, II, PGDM, Great Lakes Institute of Management, Gurugram

The step taken by Delhi University is commendable, as it will address the issues of lack of transparency and injustice in the education system, even if partially. This step will reduce the number of fraudulent applications, but the more viable solution lies in the digital space. One such solution is to link a student's Aadhar card with his/her educational qualifications. Whenever a student appears for any exam, his/her attendance can be marked by using the pre-recorded biometrics. Thus, there won't be a need to verify academic documents and greater transparency can be guaranteed.

The story can be read online here.